To Whom It May Concern:

This letter of recommendation concerns Anuj Wahi. Anuj was assigned to the Marketing Research Department at B. Braun Medical and completed a 10-week internship. During that time, Anuj was assigned a variety of research-related assignments.

Anuj immediately took responsibility of not only learning the skills necessary to complete the assignment, but enthusiastically asked questions in order to be sure that he remained on target with the expectations. He continually strived to go above and beyond the duties required of him. During this time he was required to take on projects that were outside his comfort level in terms of computer skills but he overcame this with his own pursuance of training and working with those that could coach him through the assignments. He has developed a strong basic level understanding of Excel and researching various topics through subscription-based databases and online systems.

Anuj is a very pleasant and polite individual. He has the desire and ability to take every project beyond the required tasks.

Anuj would be an asset to any organization looking for someone whose work ethic and dedication is critical to the success of a team or the organization. He has the ability to adapt quickly to situations, asks questions when they need to be asked, and works well independently to find the resources necessary to complete an assignment. He is also outgoing and has a great sense of humor.

We would welcome Anuj back again in the future to assist the Marketing Department.

Sincerely,

Dineen M. Zimmer
Manager, Market Research
